

Coaching Clinics

Sometimes leaders are aware they want something more than just a once-off seminar but not something as formal or intensive as an accredited college course.

BUV Leadership Training is pioneering some missional 'coaching clinics' to address this need and help coach leaders or ministers to transform their communities.

The key features of these clinics are:

- a small group of key leaders or ministers (5-15)
- meeting together regularly (e.g., once per month over a series of months)
- grappling with particular issues in ministry
- getting input from a skilled facilitator and resource-person
- supporting one another and sharing stories and challenges from different ministry contexts
- sharing a meal or coffee together.

There may be three clinics on offer soon:

- Children and Families' Ministry with Sue Bluett.
- Community development and the local church
- A third one depending on people's interests.

Other missional coaching clinics that may run over coming years might include some of these topics:

- children's ministry
- leading change
- leading through growth barriers
- community engagement and outreach
- transitioning to a small groupbased church
- serving local schools
- church planting
- using 'Fit4Life' or 'Out of theBox'.
- conflict resolution
- managing a building andstewardship program
- effective teams and working witha senior pastor/ associate pastor
- fostering holistic spiritualitywith different streams (charismatic, social justice and evangelical spirituality).

The aim is to bring pastors and leaders together around a shared challenge and issue, and also foster collegiality and mutual support.

If you are interested in one of the above, or another clinic topic, please contact Darren darren.cronshaw@buv.com.au.

"BUV Leadership Training Coaching leaders to transform their communities"